

P&T Motion History Long Acting Opioid

Drugs Reviewed	Motion	Date Reviewed	Scan Update Accepted as Adequate Update	Reiteration of Prior Motion	Decision
buprenorphine transdermal film codeine dihydrocodeine fentanyl transdermal film hydromorphone levorphanol methadone morphine morphine sulfate & naltrexone HCL oxycodone oxymorphone	After considering the updated evidence of safety, efficacy and special populations for the treatment of non-cancer pain, I move that buprenorphine transdermal film, transdermal fentanyl, oral oxycodone ER, morphine ER, methadone, levorphanol, and oxymorphone are safe and efficacious when used appropriately and have similar adverse effects. There should be more than one oral preferred drug in the long acting opioid class. Motion: Gaster Second Smith	February 15, 2012	NA		Passed unanimous
buprenorphine transdermal film codeine dihydrocodeine fentanyl transdermal film hydromorphone levorphanol methadone morphine morphine sulfate & naltrexone HCL oxycodone	This committee recommends that a health advisory be sent to all prescribers in the state which educates clinicians about the issues pertaining to unintentional deaths due to long acting opioids including oxycodone, morphine, fentanyl and methadone and which would include important prescribing issues which are particular to methadone. Motion: Gaster 2 nd : Cordy	December 21, 2011	NA		Passed unanimous

P&T Motion History Long Acting Opioid

oxymorphone
transdermal fentanyl oral oxycodone morphine methadone levorphanol codeine dihydrocodeine oxymorphone	After considering the updated evidence of safety, efficacy and special populations for the treatment of non-cancer pain, I move that transdermal fentanyl, oral oxycodone ER, morphine ER, methadone, levorphanol, and oxymorphone are safe and efficacious when used appropriately and have similar adverse effects. There should be more than one preferred drug in the long acting opioid class. No long acting opioid is associated with fewer adverse events in special populations.	December 15, 2010	Yes Wiscomb Varley	Yes Varley Wiscomb	Passed unanimous